

Help your child succeed

In last week's newsletter we shared the image below with parents. The more parents read with their children, especially up to year 6, then the better your child's long term prospects.

We are all very busy parents, trying to juggle family life with work. However, the time you spend reading with your son/ daughter now is so important. It will substantially improve their life chances. There are so so many studies that show the importance of parents reading with their children. It only needs to be 20 minutes each day, this 20 minutes will make a huge difference to their education.

Studies have shown that children that read with their parents for 20 minutes each day are more likely to be in the top 10%. However, children that don't read with their parents are more likely to be in the bottom 10%. Please, please, please be the parent that helps their child succeed.
